Everyone knows, that if you want to get anywhere in life, you can't do it alone. However, one can't reach their goals in life without hard work and ambition that comes from one's self and this is true for current Junior at Point Loma Nazarene University and River City High School Graduate, Jordan Ligons of the class of 2012.

"I really want to leave a stamp, make an impact even, everywhere that I've been," said Ligons.

Ligons is point guard for her San Diego school women's basketball team, The Sea Lions. Just being a basketball player is a daunting task, however Jordan took her college experience to a whole other level.

In addition to playing basketball, Ligons is majoring in journalism and is the editor of the arts and entertainment page of Point Loma's paper, "The Point," as well as being the first student liaison on the board of directors for the San Diego Press Club.

Aland Hoermann, who has taught Journalism at River City for six years, named Ligons his editor-in-chief for "OuRCity News" during his first year on the job. She held the position from her sophomore year until she graduated.

"She comes from a very supportive family, she just had a lot of energy and enthusiasm, and she was a natural leader," said Hoermann. "She was always very positive, she was never condescending to other students... How she was in journalism is how she was on the basketball court."

Having made her mark on RCHS's journalism program, Ligons has made an impression on her current journalism advisor at

A state of song

The state capitol building in Sacramento has welcomed festive music for the holidays since opening in December of 1869.

Midday on Sunday, Dec. 21, it was the turn of the West Sacramento Community Singers to perform on the capitol rotunda. They sang under the direction of Dr. Charles Vail. The group has been practicing for its holiday concerts since September at the First Christian Church in Sacramento.

You can part of the performance on video at: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-jO_BXNvV2Qc&feature=youtu.be We'll include an easy link to that video soon at our website (WestSac.com).

Senior shuttle extended

By Al Zagofsky
Correspondent

The fate of the Senior Shuttle service was the hot topic on West Sacramento City Council's December 17 agenda has over half a dozen seniors and their representatives urged the Council not to abandon the current paratransit senior shuttle service.

For several weeks, the West Sacramento Parks and Recreation Department and the Commission on Aging has been telling the current ridership that the existing service contract is ending and will not be renewed, and that the seniors will have to consider an alternative service such as the YoloBus Paratransit.

At the Council meeting, Bob Johnston, the Director of Parks and Recreation for West Sacramento, indicated that the city of West Sacramento will, over the short term, continue the existing service.

"We plan to continue the current program throughout December and probably into January, and perhaps into February," Johnston said. "The

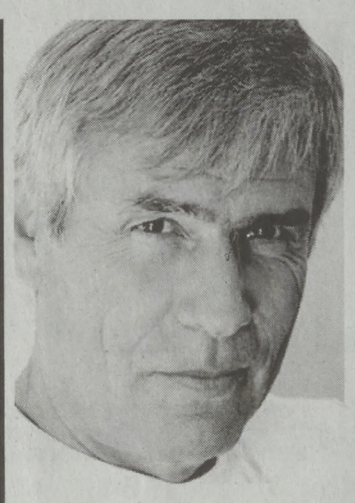
Gift book: different joys for different readers

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Editor's note: Daryl is taking Christmas week off. Below is one of his favorite holiday columns from the past.

Well, another Christmas is almost here, but unfortunately, when you get to be my age, Santa Claus is no longer the lovable gift-giver he used to be. He still looks pretty much the same, with his big belly, fluffy white beard and wind-chilled pink cheeks, but for me, the magical black bag which is always slung over his sturdy shoulder at this time of year has sadly changed forever. And why is that you may ask? Well, to be brutally honest about it, it's because for the past few decades or so, most of the really good stuff in Santa's big bag never gets wrapped up and handed over to me.

Gone are the days when I used to wait with uncontrollable excitement for Santa to bring me a Davey Crockett coonskin hat, or a pair of Roy Rogers' six-shooters, or a shiny new dump truck. Nor do I any longer hold my breath in expectation of a Lone Ranger mask, or a Willie Mays autographed baseball glove, or the best possible Christmas gift of all – a brand new shiny bicycle. No, I'm afraid when it comes to Santa Claus and his wonderful bag of goodies, growing up just ain't what it's cracked up to be.

Anyway, as the years have gone by, I have counted my blessings and quietly resigned myself to receiving socks, ties, shirts, and other kinds of "clothes" for Christmas. This year, however, I did drop a few hints that I wouldn't mind seeing a really interesting new book to read in my holiday stocking, and my daughter came through big-time.

The name of the book is Galileo's Daughter, by Dava Sobel, and it recounts the lives of the famous 17th century scientist and founder of modern physics and his loving daughter, Sister Maria Celestre Galilei, who spent her entire adult life as a cloistered nun in a small Italian village.

"I knew you would enjoy that book," my daughter said after I told her I could hardly put it down once I began reading it.

"How did you know I would like it so much?" I asked her with interest.

"Because it's got a bunch of stuff in there about the Black Death," she replied with a smile, knowing that I have always been fascinated by the history of the Bubonic Plague, which was once the most feared disease known to man. (From 1346 through 1349 alone, it claimed 25 million lives, or roughly one-third of the population of Europe, North Africa and the Middle East.)

"So, I take it you read the book before you put it in my Christmas stocking?" I asked my daughter.

"Well, I mostly just read the letters Galileo's daughter wrote to her father from her convent. I can't believe how nuns used to live back then, sleeping on hard boards, continually fasting, going barefoot even in the winter, and always wearing the same exact drab brown robes day after day after day. And they even pulled their own teeth when they had a really bad toothache."

"But did you read the part about how the first symptoms of the Black Death were large, painful, pus-filled lumps, called buboes, which gave the disease its name – the Bubonic Plague? Or how the doctors back then would cut open the buboes, suck out the blood, and put leeches on them?"

"Yuck!"

"And listen to this," I said to my daughter, opening the book up to one of my favorite passages, `Prevailing treatment for the Black Death included bloodletting, crystals of arsenic applied to the wrists and temples, small sacks of precious stones laid over the heart, placing a quartered pigeon or a plucked rooster on the buboes, and unguents made by cooking animal excrement together with mustard, crushed glass, turpentine, poison ivy, and an onion."

"That's disgusting, Dad!"

"Actually," I said, warming to the subject, "medieval and Renaissance medical theory was really quite interesting. It was based on what was then considered the earth's four elements – earth, fire, air and water, each of which had a related function in the body. For instance, there was your black bile, your yellow bile, blood and phlegm, each of which affected specific organs like the spleen, liver, heart and brain, and produced the qualities of dry, cold, dry heat, moist heat and moist cold. And depending upon...."

"Would you please stop that!" my daughter suddenly interrupted me, obviously not the least bit interested in what I was talking about.

"But I thought you said you really enjoyed reading Galileo's Daughter?"

"I did, but only the parts about being a nun," she explained.

"Really?" I said with surprise. "I never knew you were interested in the kinds of lives nuns led back in the Middle Ages."

"I think all girls at one time or another have thought about what it would be like to be a nun. I know I have."

"No kidding?" I asked, surprised.

"Sure. But I'm afraid I could never have been one – especially back then."

"Why is that?" I asked with interest.

"Because I have never looked good in brown."

`Prevailing treatment for the Black Death included bloodletting, crystals of arsenic applied to the wrists and temples, small sacks of precious stones laid over the heart, placing a quartered pigeon or a plucked rooster on the buboes, and unguents made by cooking animal excrement together with mustard, crushed glass, turpentine, poison ivy, and an onion.'

In presenting the award, City Manager Martin Tuttle said Cooney is "always willing to go the extra mile, with a smile on his face and a desire to improve any situation." He helped on the recent North Levee Clean-up project and in restoring the Broderick Boat Ramp to a safe and attractive condition.

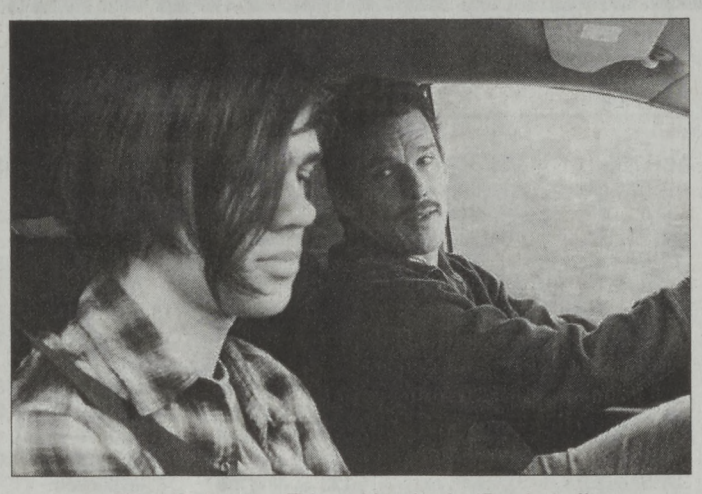
PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Boyhood" (R) -- Over the course of 12 years, director Richard Linklater made a film about growing up in which we get to see an actor age. Mason (Ellar Coltrane) lives with his mom (Patricia Arquette) and his spastic older sister (Lorelei Linklater). Every so often, their rolling-stone dad (Ethan Hawke) comes back around to teach the kid a lesson about being a man or voicing his feelings. It's a big story told in a series of small moments.

Starting when he was just 7 years old, Ellar Coltrane worked on the film shoot with Linklater for a little while each summer. The result is Mason's coming-of-age story, in which we see how a contemplative boy caught between his estranged parents changes over years. It may not be the most life-altering story, but it truly is a unique movie-watching experience.



Ellar Coltrane, Ethan Hawke in 'Boyhood'

"Get On Up" (PG-13) -- James Brown, the Godfather of Soul, lived one of those lives made for musical biopics. He grew up impoverished in a dusty part of Georgia with an abusive father (Lennie James) and a mother who walked out (Viola Davis). Chadwick Boseman (the lead in last year's Jackie Robinson biopic, "42"), brings Brown to life with a crackling energy and fervent commitment.

Director Tate Taylor ("The Help") shows the highs, lows and explosive performances that defined the man. Behind the scenes, Brown could be a tyrant and a monster consumed by drugs and ego, but a completely different vision comes out when he's breaking himself down on stage. The wild use of flashbacks and uneven pacing can be difficult, but Boseman's performance keeps you watching and caring.

"Horns" (R) -- Ig Parrish (Daniel Radcliffe) and Meri Williams (Juno Temple) are two little lovebirds, until Meri's body is found brutalized in the woods. Ig, even with his boy-next-door looks, becomes the prime suspect and the most hated guy in town. Depressed and reviled over a crime he didn't commit, Ig starts to grow horns, literally. As Ig's visage becomes more devilish, people around him feel compelled to spill their darkest desires to him, seeking permission to do the bad things they really want to do. It's a dark fantasy thriller comedy with a new twist, but it's so distracted that it can't settle on a tone. A lack of tonal clarity makes it hard to laugh at jokes or gasp at drama.

"Left Behind" (PG-13) -- This is a religious disaster flick that goes light on the religion and comes out as an overall disaster. Nicolas Cage (oh yes) stars as Rayford Steele (cool name, bro), a morally impure airline pilot who gets left behind when the biblical rapture takes all of the good people to heaven. He's flying a commercial jet over the Atlantic ocean when a bunch of people disappear, leaving only empty clothes behind. Rayford has to safely land the plane -- which seems pretty difficult, even though he's a pilot -- while his college-age daughter wanders a partially emptied New York City.

"Charlie Chaplin: A Brief Life"
by Peter Ackroyd
(Nan A. Talese/Doubleday, $25.95)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

Even though Charlie Chaplin was, without a doubt, one of the most famous entertainers of all time, very little is actually known about his origins. No certificate of his birth or entry in a baptism registry has ever been found. He is believed to have been born off Walworth Road in London on or about April 16, 1889. Chaplin would later confide to friends that he wasn't even certain of the identity of his biological father. In the vernacular of the period, he may have been a love child.

His mother, Hannah, was mentally ill and spent most of her adult life in institutions. Charlie and his half-brother, Syd, bounced around from charity homes to workhouses. Charlie began his working career as a clog dancer when he joined the Eight Lancashire Lads. After several tours, the group arrived in the United States in 1910. With Syd acting as his manager, Charlie began making films at Keystone Studios. Within a decade of his arrival in America, he had become one of the nation's most popular motion picture stars.

Best-selling biographer Peter Ackroyd focuses on Chaplin and his often controversial life. In addition to documenting many of his classic films, Ackroyd traces the actor from his humble theatrical beginnings in music halls to his work in Hollywood, which earned him an honorary Academy Award in 1972 and a knighthood three years later.

Chaplin's image still is instantly recognized throughout the world, although he died some 37 years ago. Chaplin was a complex man, especially in his relationships with women. He was married four times and fathered 11 children. Ackroyd sorts out Chaplin's personal life as well as his professional one.

Ackroyd's brief but engaging book offers fresh revelations about one of the most familiar faces of the past century and brings the "Little Tramp" vividly to life once again.

The Kitchen Diva

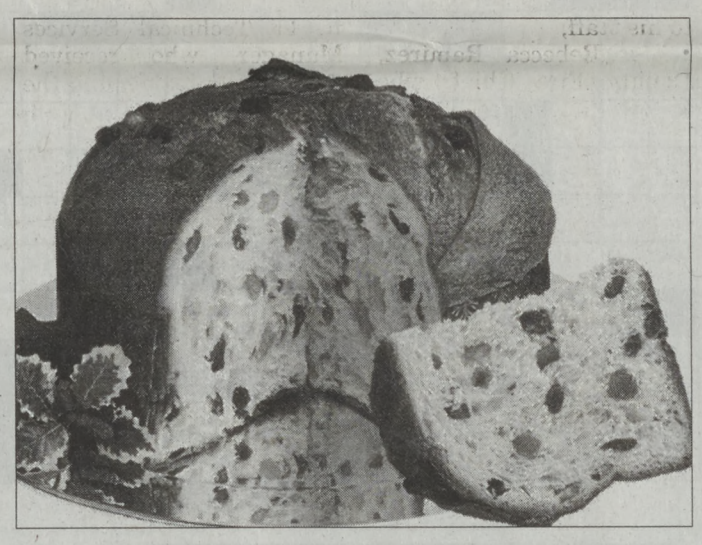
Christmas Bread

When we think of Christmas baking, we usually think of cookies and cakes, and even the tradition of homemade candies. But in Europe, and especially in Italy, sweet luscious breads -- doughs enriched with eggs and butter and loaded with dried fruits and cream -- have special prominence during the holidays.



While it's been a long-held custom the world over to mark Christmas with special food, in the 1300s and 1400s in Italy, Christmas treats were especially anticipated. At that time, wheat was a rare commodity, and during the rest of the year, bread was made with harder, poorer-quality grains. In Milan, controls were so strict that the bakers were not allowed to use wheat flour except on Christmas Eve. So it was an extraordinary event indeed when Christmas came and bakers were able to make tender loaves of simple bread from flour made from those soft kernels.

Later, a sweet, buttery, yeasted "cake" began to appear in the same city. Legend says that Panettone is named after a creative, quick-thinking kitchen attendant to the 13th-century Duke of Milan named Toni. He combined leavened dough with butter, sugar and raisins to replace a dessert that had burned. Pan del Toni, the unmistakable yeasty, fruit-studded, heaven-scented bread, has become the Panettone we relish today. During the holiday season, tender, moist loaves of Panettone are shipped to us from across the sea.

The traditional way of making of Panettone is a drawn-out affair and involves using a natural yeast and a two-day dough fermentation process. The extended fermentation gives the bread a long shelf life. This complex process is why preparing and eating Panettone is a seasonal event.

Our recipe for Cranberry Panettone Muffins reflects the unique flavors and opulent tastes of traditional Panettone, but it is more accessible to the home cook.

CRANBERRY PANETTONE MUFFINS

2 packages dry yeast (about 4 1/2 teaspoons)
1 1/4 cups warm water (100 F to 110 F)
5 3/4 cups all-purpose flour, divided
3/4 cup sugar
7 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh orange rind
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs
2 1/2 cups sweetened dried cranberries
1/4 cup finely chopped crystallized ginger
Cooking spray
2 tablespoons almonds, chopped finely

1. Dissolve yeast in warm water in a large bowl; let stand 5 minutes. Lightly spoon 1 1/4 cups flour into a dry measuring cup; level with a knife. Add to yeast mixture, stirring with a whisk to combine. Cover; let rise in a warm place (85 F), free from drafts, for 1 hour.

2. Combine sugar, butter, rind and salt in a large bowl; beat with a heavy-duty stand mixer at medium speed until light and fluffy (about 3 minutes). Add eggs, beating until combined; beat in yeast mixture.

3. Lightly spoon remaining 4 cups flour into dry measuring cup; level with a knife. Add flour to egg mixture, beating at medium speed until smooth. Turn dough out onto a floured surface. Knead until smooth and elastic (about 3 minutes); add enough of remaining 1/2 cup flour, 1 tablespoon at a time, to prevent dough from sticking to hands (dough will feel sticky). Knead in cranberries and ginger until well incorporated.

4. Place dough in a large bowl coated with cooking spray, turning to coat top. Cover and let rise in a warm place (85 F), free from drafts, 1 hour or until doubled in size. (Gently press two fingers into dough. If indentation remains, dough has risen enough.)

6. Coat 6 (1-cup) muffin cups with cooking spray. Cut 6 (5 by 12-inch) strips of parchment paper; place paper in muffin cups to extend 3 inches from the top of the cups. (Lining the muffin cups with strips of parchment makes it easy to remove the Panettones after baking.)

7. Divide dough evenly among muffin cups. Lightly spray each muffin with cooking spray; sprinkle evenly with nuts. Let rise in a warm place (85 F), free from drafts, 1 hour or until doubled in size. (You also can prepare this recipe in traditional muffin tins for a yield of 18; trim the parchment paper for the muffin cups to 2 1/2 x 6 inches, and shorten the baking time to 20 minutes.)

8. While muffins rise, preheat the oven to 375 F.

9. After muffins have doubled in size, bake at 375 F for 25 minutes or until muffins are lightly browned. Makes 24 (1/4 muffin) servings.

TIP: To store muffins, line bottom of an airtight container with paper towels, place muffins inside, add another layer of paper towels on top of muffins to absorb any moisture. Seal the lid. Muffins will keep up to four days. Reheat muffins in the microwave for 30 seconds before serving.

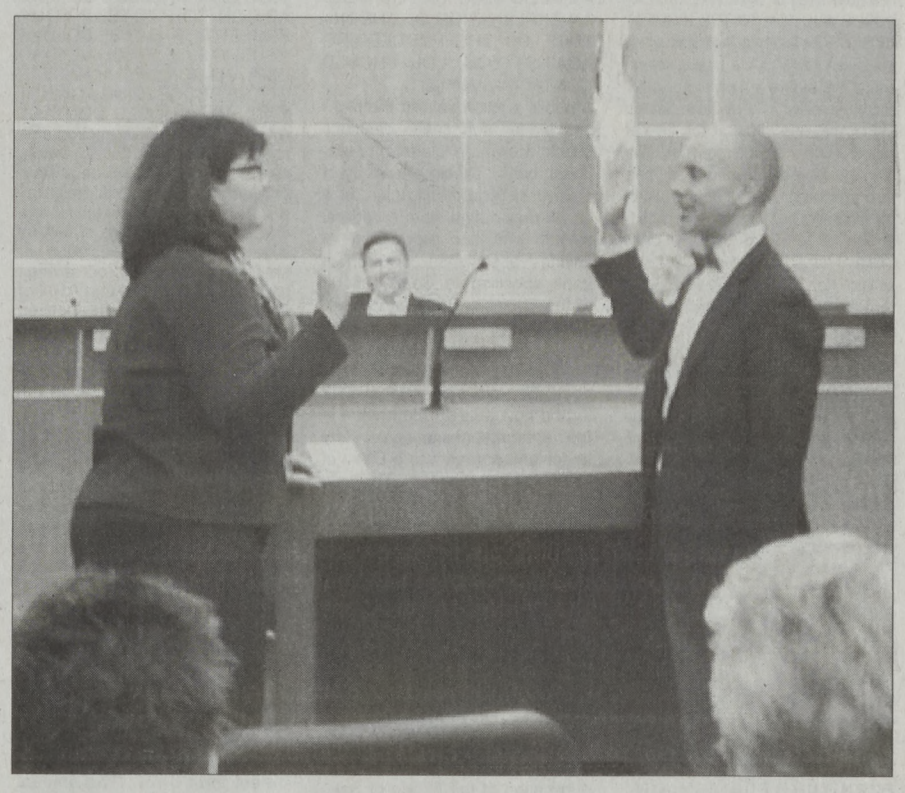
Re-elected council members sworn-in



Mayor Christopher Cabaldon (right) was sworn in for another two-year term last Wednesday by Kryss Rankin, City Clerk. Cabaldon easily won re-election during the November local ballot.

Also reelected last month were city council members Mark Johannessen and Chris Ledesma, who each earned another four-year term from local voters.

Johannessen finished up a stint as 'mayor pro tem' last week. The council selected Chris Ledesma (whose face can be seen above just to the right of Rankin) as 'mayor pro tem' for the coming year. It's essentially a vice mayor's post.

In West Sacramento, the mayor's position is a two-year, separately-elected position. The other four members of the council receive four-year terms. Every two years, two of those seats go up for reelection.

Party and prizes at Collings Teen Center

Seventy employees from Agrium and Clark Pacific (two West Sacramento companies) and the Collings Teen Center at 1541 Merkley Avenue hosted a Christmas meal for 130 local kids and their parents on Dec. 13 at the center.

Visitors received a turkey dinner, games, activities and a visit from Santa. There were also giveaways: four families each received a TV, one got a laptop and one lucky girl got a bike.

"The families that got TVs were ecstatic!" reported Rosa Clements, the director of the teen center. "One was a family with seven girls. The mom was yelling and cheering on the phone. Another had three girls, and the mom started to cry, saying she's never won anything in her life."

Donations from the community included 250 jackets to give away, 40 pairs of socks, 80 pairs of gloves and 150 hats, amont other items.

The teen center's year-round mission is "to be a safe place where young people are always welcome after school, a place where activities are blended with tutoring, community service, educational seminars, trips outside the area, and job training," reported a spokesperson.

The facility offers a free meal each afternoon to any young person coming in.
